THE CHARGES AGAINST HEWITT.

An Exciting Meeting of the Foreign Affairs Committee Held.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Abram S. Hewitt appeared before the foreign affairs committee of the house yesterday morning and explained the part played by him in the matter of the passage of the resolutions asking Great Britain to grant a respite to O'Donnell, murderer of Carey, the Irish informer. The English government refused to grant the request of the house and O'Donnell was hanged. He also was accused of having informed the British minister that the resolution introduced by him [illegible] reflect the sentiments of the people of the United States on this question and that he presented it to avert the introduction of resolutions of a more objectionable character. The feeling that he tampered with the dignity of congress and committed an act of gross impropriety became so strong that Brumm of Pennsylvania introduced a resolution asking the foreign affairs committee to make an investigation of the charges.

HEWITT AND BELMONT AT OUTS.

Relations between Hewitt and Belmont have for a long time been greatly strained, and as the latter sat at one side of the table twirling a lead pencil in his fingers, and Hewitt at the foot of the board addressing the committee, spectators were reminded of the famous Blaine-Belmont episode of two years ago. Hewitt made a long statement to the committee, explaining his reason for introducing the resolution and the circumstances of his call at the British ministers and denying that he apologized [illegible] much as has already been published in interviews with him. At the conclusion of his statement he laid before the committee a letter written [illegible] by West, British minister. In this letter West said Hewitt had called upon him, and that they had conversed in a friendly manner about the O'Donnell resolutions, but Hewitt had made no apology for the introduction. What Hewitt explained that he had offered the resolution because he knew that another resolution was to be offered in a tone less friendly and considerate of the feeling of the British government. After reading this letter Hewitt said he had heard that various statements were made to members of the committee. He had reason to believe that these stories originated from Belmont and they to him he owed all the annoyance he had suffered from willful misrepresentations published regarding his action.

BELMONT'S REPLY.

Belmont accepted the challenge thrown down by Hewitt, and said that he had talked about Hewitt's action to certain representatives, but had spared Hewitt in whatever allusion he had made, by refraining from expressing his personal opinion as to the impropriety of his colleague's action. Belmont said that the Irish question was a burning one with English people and that the representative of [illegible] majesty's government would have been derelict in his duty if he had not notified the British foreign office of statements made by Hewitt. [illegible] brought Hewitt's visit and statements to West under the circumstances were undignified and, as the house had passed the resolutions unanimously, Hewitt's action was such as every member ought to resent.

The committee remained in session nearly an hour after its usual time for adjournment and listened eagerly to the bitter controversy between the two gentlemen.

Hewitt protested that Belmont misrepresented him, and he denied unequivocally many of the statements the latter made. The meeting altogether was one of the most sensational ever held at the capitol. Another meeting will be held to-day to decide whether the investigation proposed shall be held. Every member was bound to secrecy with regard to yesterday's proceedings.

CONGRESSIONAL CHIT-CHAT.

WHISKY MEN GIVEN AN UNUSUAL FAVOR.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The whisky men have scored a point in securing an agreement from the ways and means committee that their bill to extend the bonded period on distilled spirits shall be reported to the house without recommendation. A majority of the committee are opposed to the bill, and if the members had voted in committee according to their convictions the bill could never have been brought into the house. Why this unusual favor should be extended to distillers is a matter of comment. The explanation received with the most favor is that Representative Blackburn bulldozed the tariff reformers and demanded that the house should have an opportunity to pass upon the bill, and according to report, hinted that it was doubtful if any tariff bill would be reported from the committee until after the extension bill had been given a place upon the calendar.

Members of the committee who are opposed to the whisky bill reserve the right to speak and vote against it in the house. No effort will be spared by distillers and bankers who have loaned money upon liquors to put the bill through. The old method of lobbying will not be employed by distillers to pass their bill. If any money is spent it will be used directly among members, without calling on outsiders to handle it. Great pressure will also be brought to bear in a proper manner by business men who are interested in the passage of the bill.

PETITION FROM WEALTHY CATTLE MEN.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—A petition was forwarded to the Illinois delegation in congress to-day signed largely by wealthy cattle owners and prominent business men of this city, urging the passage of the pleuro-pneumonia bill now pending in congress. The petition recites that the bill was drawn by a committee appointed by a convention of cattle raisers and farmers representing an actual ownership of not less than $50,000,000 worth of cattle, and that among those who assisted in framing the bill were men of large experience and among the largest cattle owners of the country. The petition declares that the protest on part of Chicago cattle brokers, which has heretofore been noticed, is based upon misapprehension of the provisions of the bill, and that the bill can in no wise interfere with the cattle traffic in states not affected with contagious pleuro-pneumonia, and in those infected states to a degree no greater than is essential to the eradication of the disease.

MORRISON OFFERS A SUBSTITUTE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Morrison has offered in the ways and means committee a substitute for the bill under discussion in the committee on extension of the bonded whisky period. The substitute provides that the bonded period shall be extended not exceeding two years from the date the tax has or would have fallen due.

FOR A POSTOFFICE BUILDING AT OAKLAND.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Miller introduced in the senate this morning a bill appropriating $150,000 for the purchase of a site and the erection of a suitable building at Oakland for the accommodation of the postoffice and government use.

ROUGH ON THE ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The house committee on public lands has agreed to report in favor of a forfeiture of 40,000,000 acres granted to the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, leaving 6,000,000 acres as earned by laying track between Albuquerque and the Colorado river.

THE CHINESE BILL.

Senate Protests Against Repeated Postponement by the Committee.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—On Thursday a meeting of the house committee on foreign affairs was held, but the Chinese exclusion bill was not taken up. It had been set for consideration, and the committee had agreed to prepare a report, but owing to the investigation into the Hewitt-O'Donnell resolution it was displaced. Henley was present for a few moments and made a short sharp speech to the committee concerning the constant postponement of the bill. He reminded the democrats that the people of the Pacific coast will not stand much fooling with the measure and that they expected prompt action. Accordingly the bill was set for Tuesday night, and it is thought some decision will be reached.

Mr. Henley says to-night that there was but one democrat on the committee who probably would not vote to report the bill just as it is. This is Deuster of Wisconsin, who so far has evaded expressing an opinion. He thought all the republican members of the committee would refuse to consent to make a favorable report. Being asked how Perry Belmont stood, he said that so far Belmont had only [illegible] to only [illegible] that was for one [illegible] during [illegible] in the United States to loaf [illegible] Henley said he had [illegible] Belmont's request to strike [illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] supporters of the bill and [illegible] taxable reports. He says that twenty years ago, when a member of the [illegible] legislature, he predicted the [illegible] Chinese immigration and ever since has been in favor of stopping it. He said he still insists on action being taken next Tuesday.

A LONDONER'S LOGIC.

An Englishman Issues a Pamphlet Entitled "The Confederate Debt and Private Southern Debts."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Many members of congress to-day received a pamphlet printed in London, England, written by J. Ban Robertson, dated February [illegible] entitled "The Confederate Debt and Private Southern Debts." It is an argument upon the legal status of bonds held by [illegible] which were issued by the southern confederacy. In the introduction the writer [illegible] texts of the books as follows: "I have not pretended [illegible] to be a lawyer, and therefore the following [illegible] are [illegible] solely [illegible]." The [illegible] that the [illegible] have any validity whatever [illegible] that there [illegible] and cases [illegible] bonds which really conflicts with the views of their illegality in the United States [illegible] arising out of the original controversy between the north and the south not being cognizable by any court are reserved as to [illegible] matter for consideration by the United States, and are therefore outside the scope of the present discussion. That there is [illegible] dollar [illegible] against [illegible] the [illegible] of the war [illegible] only bonds [illegible] from the southern states, [illegible] and for which [illegible] are not in any way affected by the fourteenth amendment and they [illegible] ought to be paid by the United States.

McKUSICK'S DISMISSAL.

Gresham Says he has Sufficient Cause for the Removal.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Late yesterday afternoon Postmaster General Gresham made an order removing H. J. McKusick, superintendent of the eighth district of the railway mail service at San Francisco, upon a charge which has been pending before him for several weeks. Gresham appointed James L. Wilder, now assistant superintendent of the Chicago division, to McKusick's place. The latter has been notified to turn his office in charge of his chief clerk until Wilder's arrival, who will proceed to San Francisco at once. Wilder is one of the oldest employes in the postal service and department officials say he is one of the most competent.

GRESHAM INTERVIEWED.

Postmaster General Gresham was asked this evening for some explanation of McKusick's removal. He seemed disinclined to say anything, but finally remarked: "Of course McKusick was removed for cause. If there had been no cause he would not have been removed. I hardly know what to say about the charges against him. Perhaps it would be proper to say nothing. There is a railroad, I believe, running from Sacramento to the state line called the California and Oregon railroad. It was in connection with [illegible] this railway that McKusick was removed. This was all Mr. [illegible] would say. It may be stated, however, that it is understood he violated the rules of the department in weighing mails on the California and Oregon road, for which charges were preferred and made that favoritism had been shown.

ACTRESSES LOVE DOGS.

A Talk with a Soubrette while she Prepares for the Stage.

All good actresses have a [illegible] pet, and Miss Alice Hastings of [illegible] is no exception to the rule, [illegible] Chicago News.

"Here's Chic," said the pretty soubrette as she entered the greenroom with a rosy [illegible] cheeks and eyes and a small [illegible] tan snugly tucked away under the [illegible] of her sealskin sacque. The maid took the little beast in her lap, unstrapped his woolen blanket, tossed him up and down as though he were a crying baby, talked most affectionately to him and kissed him.

Miss Hastings removed her wraps and taking a couple of chop bones which were folded up in tissue paper [illegible] gave them to Chic, and ordered him to bed till the play was over.

"Oh, Chic understands me," said the mistress. "He's a Chicagoan too by the way. His mother belonged to McVicker's stock company and when the fellow was born we christened him Chicago. He was the first and only dog born in McVicker's theater and we had a great time about it. Chic comes to the theater whenever I do, but he goes to take his bone and sleeps through the play, but has to have his supper when it's over."

"Does he travel with you?"

"Yes, indeed. But you know they don't allow dogs on the cars, so I have to smuggle him in. I wrap him up in an ulster and he keeps quiet till he wants a drink. After refreshments I double him up again and he's good till we reach our destination. Sagacious? I should say so. He knows when he's in a railroad car as well as I do."

Her friends say she has read herself crazy. [illegible] and is conversant with every character in Shakespeare and the English novelists—Dickens, Thackeray and Bulwer especially. [illegible] but has very small bones [illegible] pounds. Her fat annoys her [illegible] that malleable, manageable texture which can be pressed down to a very small compass, or squeezed into a tight waist with admirable effect. She wears her hair, which was not long ago thirty [illegible] inches long, cut close to her head.

"Oh, I don't wear flannel of any description, silk stockings, gauze merinoes and [illegible] underwear I find [illegible]. I'm a great hand for cold water and take a plunge bath every morning of the year.

"Eat? oh, anything I can get. But I never have any supper till after the play, because I think a full meal injures the voice for several hours after. It [illegible] in fact I have a good supper after the play, if not I can subsist on bread and cheese and beer."

As she talked she began to rub grease paint on the hair over her temples and in reply to an inquiry, said: "Oh, that's to match my wig." Brushing her thick brown hair from her forehead with a cotton band she got a little tin bucket full of cold cream, which she rubbed over her face before making it up. "As this cream is made by Miss Hastings and used daily, and as it has preserved her complexion from all eruptions, chaps and discolorations, the recipe may be of service.

"I never use [illegible] because [illegible] it burns the skin and increases its [illegible]. I go to the chemist and get four ounces of almond oil, two ounces of rosewater, two [illegible] of cocoa butter, one ounce of white wax, and one [illegible]. I put them all in a bowl, set it [illegible] hot water till melted and when cold add [illegible]. Put it in a mug or tin box and you have a [illegible] perfectly harmless cream to preserve the skin."

Here she picked up a little [illegible] began to rouge her face. Her eyes were made up [illegible].

Miss Hastings has a figure that will [illegible] dress, but few women are ever seen with so [illegible] perfectly fitting [illegible] as she wears on the stage. They are [illegible] improvement. Her [illegible] order by [illegible] in the back with [illegible] was [illegible] her waist.

Occasional doses of [illegible] Liver Invigorator will keep the [illegible] in good order. Sure.

THE CROP OUTLOOK.

Rainfall at San Francisco as Compared with Previous Years—Crop Notes.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—All doubts as to there being an adequate rainfall this season now appear to be dispelled. The record for San Francisco up to to-day was as follows: 1884, [illegible]; 1883, [illegible]; 1882, [illegible]; 1881, [illegible]; 1880, [illegible]. We are now [illegible] inches ahead of the corresponding period of 1882 and 1883, though still [illegible] inches behind the record for the bonanza year of 1880 and 1881. The latter, however, possesses no particular significance, for with less rain than in that year prospects are very bright.

The grain bag market shows a hardening tendency in keeping with the increasing prospective requirements for the new crop season. On call yesterday 70,000 [illegible] Calcuttas, this year's importation, were offered at $9 [illegible] per 100. Importers entertain higher views than these figures represent.

Wheat is rather steady in the local market as last quoted, and the English market shows no quotable change. There has been some activity in white cereals, but cargoes have it is stated already been secured for vessels taken on call. Both wheat and barley futures have steadily declined.

The amount of tonnage under engagement to load wheat this month was 27,000 tons against 49,000 tons for the corresponding date last year, showing a decrease of [illegible] tons. There were twenty-nine vessels under engagement to load wheat, including eighteen at adjacent points. Engaged and disengaged tonnage has a carrying capacity for 274,000 short tons against a capacity for 140,500 tons in the corresponding date last year, being an increase of 128,[illegible] tons.

A Nevada Avalanche.

A family named Maxwell, consisting of man, wife and five children, were covered up in their cabin in Woodford canyon, and recovered after having been without food or light for three days. The brave rescuing party when near them found a way to pass in food between timbers by using a long pole. The Carson Appeal of February [illegible] in a long account of the avalanche and rescue, describes how the rescuers got a small opening, and then says: Those nearest the aperture followed the log and climbed in through the opening with lanterns. There in a space about ten feet square was Maxwell and his family. His wife was lying on a mattress and some blankets with a young child in her arms and three others clinging to her and crying bitterly. When the lanterns shone upon their faces they put their hands to their eyes and turned away in fear. The wife was hardly able to move, and Maxwell, who had kept a stout heart through the long days and nights of darkness, gave out at this point and cried like a child. Chester, the eldest boy, who was 9 years of age, had worked with his father to get out and was worn out with hunger and exhaustion. There were two loaves of bread within reach after the roof of the stable fell in, and he [illegible] had refused to touch a morsel, giving all to his mother and sisters. This is all that the mother, the baby and the two daughters, Mary and Callie, aged six and 4 years respectively, had to live on from Friday afternoon, when they took their last dinner, until about midnight on Sunday. There was plenty of flour and some game in the place, but the logs of the roof which were crushed in cut off all communication from these, although Maxwell and his son had nearly succeeded in cutting a way through a three foot log with a jack knife. The inmates of the terrible prison house were taken in sleighs to Woodford's, where they were soon as comfortable as warm fires, good provision and kind attention could make them.

Shooting Ducks.

Blackwood's Magazine.

And for the work (that is to follow) you would be all the better of Bruin's warm fur and blood and the elastic fixings on which Mr. Weller complimented Mr. Wardle's fat boy at Christmastide. To crouch or be extended on cold boards between wood and water with the thermometer at anything you please below the freezing point and possibly an occasional plash of sleet or small icicles driven in the face, is as great a trial of patience as of physical strength. Patience, indeed, must be the wild-fowl shooter's watchword—the dogged patience which carried Napoleon and his veterans over the snow heaped passes of St. Bernard with the five o'clock in the morning courage that Wellington praised. The wild fowler must always be calm, self-controlled and keenly observant. Though he might give the world to kick his cold heels or beat his frozen arms, movement of any kind may make him miss his chance; and yet he must wipe his streaming eyes with his cuff as they sweep the watery surface and horizon to windward. To be sure the excitement of sighting or hearing the duck is intense when the patch that might have been only blacker water reveals a phantom-like crowd of living and gabbling creatures. And supposing the stalk to be successfully accomplished so much depends on the adjustment of the gun, which needs skill and sharp eyesight, and long experience. The stragglers in the rear seem to have taken the alarm and are crowding up on the main body. The ducks drawing together there is a sudden [illegible] fluttering of pinions and lifting of heads and the sportsman may well be flurried if he wants a sitting shot. The piece is fired and as the smoke clears away forms may be distinguished struggling in the water while the screeching of the report dies down over the [illegible] cries of the cripples. There must necessarily be cruelty in these "family shots," where there may be many more casualties than deaths, although wild duck are so well quilted with [illegible] that probably fewer get away [illegible] wounded than might be expected. And for the fowler [illegible] the [illegible] there is nothing more piquant than the chase after cripples in the dusk.

I am a practicing physician, residing permanently in this place. In the year 1843, when a resident of the State of Missouri, I became acquainted with the superior virtues of Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, prepared by you. At some more leisure moment I will send you the result of an experiment I made with one vial, in expelling upwards of 500 worms.

I do hereby certify to the public that a child of mine, four years old, being troubled with worms, I was induced to purchase a bottle of Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa., which I administered, and the result was it brought away an immense number of worms in bunches and strings, many had the appearance of being cut to pieces. My child is now enjoying most excellent health. I take pleasure in recommending it to both young and old as one of the best medicines I ever used.

A JUST VERDICT.

The verdict of the jury in the Murray case is a just one. No other would have been in harmony with law and justice. It is the verdict which the public had a right to expect, and the murderer will hang, as he ought. All the more gratifying is the result because of the protracted and desperate effort made by the defense to circumvent the law and override the principles of justice. It is not too much to say that the defense in this case was based on ground and pushed to an extreme which constitute a public scandal; and the press, in the name of the people, ought to condemn the proceeding.

Insanity was the plea set up for the murderer, of course. It is unfortunate for the profession of the law that there is a class in it so ready to make so absurd a plea as this was in the present case, and to contend for it against the interests of society and the principles of justice. Such a course brings upon the profession of the law the execration of the people. It gives ground for the complaint that lawyers league themselves with criminals to shield them from punishment, and to overthrow the muniments of the law which are designed for protection of the innocent and not of the guilty. The defense in this case was conducted on the assumption that the law exists to secure the safety of criminals, not to bring them to punishment, and it was scandalous to the last degree. It obstructed and delayed justice and forced the state to great expense to beat it down.

The plea of insanity was not even a plausible one, and in the circumstances was discreditable to those who tried to maintain it. It was apparent to every fair observer that the murderer was simply a drunken and incorrigible wretch, who, in one of his fits of rage, to which he habitually stimulated himself by drink, had committed a most wanton and atrocious murder. The kind of "insanity" to which he was a victim is dispensed at the vile drinking holes which he continually haunted, and he absorbed it at the rate of fifteen to twenty-five glasses a day. At these fountains he fed and inflamed his jealousy till he was ready for the deed. It would be as good a defense, if not a better, to say that as he meant to slay another man, the murder of his brother-in-law was excusable, because it was only an accident. Of the conduct of the woman to whom he was married nothing need be said because, whatever it was, it afforded him no excuse. She was as good at least as he, and when he frequented the haunts of vice to fill himself with intoxicating swill and to dance with the vile inmates, he was scarcely in a position to be a critic of her conduct. It is an abuse of pity to suggest it for a frequenter of these reeking holes, every one of which is a nursery of the kind of "insanity" which was pleaded as a defence for this murderer. About as valid would be the plea in behalf of the keeper of the den that he is entitled to protection of the law for a "legitimate business." The public have to thank this jury that the murderous instinct stimulated by the horrid fumes and more horrid practices of these hells is not declared to be the kind of insanity that can be set up as a successful defense to the most dreadful of crimes. The plea of insanity in such a case is an outrage upon public justice, and the too common habit of setting up the plea cannot be too loudly condemned. The practice of the law ought to be in the hands of men who respect themselves and their profession too much to urge the plea in such a case. They mistake greatly who suppose it possible to lay in such way the basis of a respectable and solid reputation at the bar.

THE PLEA OF INSANITY.

The defense of insanity has been so frequently and grossly abused in this country that many intelligent public men, including the judges of some of the courts, have expressed the opinion that more discretion should be left to the courts in regard to the punishment, or at least the confinement of persons found on trial for high crimes and misdemeanors to be insane, than the statutes of most of the states and territories allow. The Massachusetts law is more in accordance with the views referred to, than that of any state with whose laws we are familiar. It provides that "when a person indicted for murder or manslaughter is acquitted by the jury by reason of insanity, the court shall order such person to be committed to one of the state lunatic hospitals during his natural life," from which he cannot be discharged except "by the governor, by and with the advice and consent of the council," after a hearing, in which it is shown to their satisfaction "that such person may be discharged without danger to others." In most of the states, when a person is acquitted on account of insanity, it is left to the discretion of the court whether he shall be committed to an asylum for the insane at all, and if committed the law allows his almost immediate discharge. The Massachusetts law was recently illustrated in the commitment to an asylum for life of Freeman, the Pocasset murderer, after he had been adjudged sane by medical experts. There is no doubt that many, if not a large majority of insane persons, and this is especially true of those afflicted with the kind of insanity recognized as "mental unsoundness," and the emotionally insane, are amenable to motives and subject to restraint through fear. Dr. John Ordronaux, professor of medical jurisprudence in the Columbia law school, says, "the mere fact of mental weakness is not an answer to an indictment for crime unless that weakness or unsoundness be the direct offspring of disease, and the disease overpower the reason and the free will at the moment of committing the offense. A weak mind is not absolved from the duty of watching over its own conduct, and restraining its evil propensities; and while it might not merit the same degree of punishment for offending as a strong one, it would be wrong to assert that it was wholly dispunishable either in law or in foro conscientiae."

A slight change in the law of this state, the addition of a clause to the statute giving the court discretion as to the acceptance of a verdict of acquittal from the jury on the ground of insanity would afford an opportunity of relief from the abuse of the defense of insanity, and protection also to society. At the trial of Dukes, it will be remembered, the judge expressed his great horror of the verdict of acquittal, and regret that the law compelled him to accept it. The result is well known. It led to another murder, to the private punishment of Dukes which the law had denied, and threats of still another which very likely, however, will not be fulfilled. It is possible, nevertheless, in such a case for private vengeance to continue to wreak itself through a series of murders—until the last victim has no avenger. If this discretion was allowed the court it would doubtless limit the number of cases in which this defense would be set up; for it is upon their ability to work upon the sensibilities of jurors, or to raise by sophistical pleas the reasonable doubt, that the defenders of criminals rely, or upon the "gilded hand" that "shoves by justice." In many of these cases, particularly murder cases, the defendant may be near enough insane to be an unfit subject for the gallows, and at the same time sane enough to merit, and require for the protection of society, imprisonment for life. We think that such cases would be more justly disposed of if the court had discretionary power to affix a proper penalty. This would be giving to the nisi prius court only that degree of authority over the person of the accused that is exercised often by courts of appeal, and the knowledge that this discretion rested with the court would prove to be a salutary check upon the ambition of criminal lawyers to gain a verdict of acquittal through the great American uncertainty of the conclusions of a jury.

The next trials for murder are to be those of Bloxam and Mrs. Fisher for the murder of Jacob Fisher. The public may get ready for the "insanity racket" once more.

A married couple perished in the City of Columbus disaster, leaving no children, but considerable property. As it is impossible to say surely which one died first, the title to the estate will have to be determined by inference. The courts, it is said, have held in cases of shipwreck, that the woman being the weaker, the law warrants the conclusion that she dies first, and therefore the husband's heirs are entitled to the property.

The unnecessary "investigation" of the methods by which all efforts to maintain an opposition to the democratic party in the southern states are suppressed elicits nothing new. The whole story is well enough known. They simply suppress the opposition to hold it in peace. The committees of investigation are simply wasting time over matters which have for years been familiar to the country.

The Walhalla, South Carolina, Courier, published in a region where illicit distilleries are numerous, and a revenue agent is regarded as a public enemy, to be shot on sight, says: "Repeal the tax on whisky, and, as if by magic, 100 or more distilleries would start in upper South Carolina, converting the staff of life into a poison." Other newspapers in the same region express like opinions.

The Kentucky legislature is endeavoring to discover who drank the 1100 gallons of whisky that was consumed in the state insane asylum last year. "There is a horrible suspicion," observes a sympathetic exchange, "that the patients drank it, and the sentiment of the commonwealth is against the waste of good liquor on people who have not sufficient intellect to enjoy it."

Persons who attempt to publish daily newspapers without having access to sources of news, and who therefore want to reprint the news from journals which have collected it by their own energy and expense, oppose the news copyright. The only opposition to the copyright comes from that quarter.

CURRENT OPINION.

BLAINE IN PENNSYLVANIA.

New York Evening Post.

There are symptoms of an impending Blaine canvass of Pennsylvania, after the manner of the one made by the Tribune just previous to the opening of the last presidential campaign. That canvass, it will be remembered, showed that at least nine-tenths of the republicans of the state preferred Blaine to all other candidates, but in spite of this showing Cameron was able to get a delegation to the national convention which had a majority against Blaine. Some authorities throw doubt upon the genuineness of Blaine's alleged popularity in the state by saying this not so "vehement" as it was four years ago, and that it is tempered by growing doubts as to his availability. That enthusiastic Blaine organ, the Philadelphia Press, does not share this view. It says that in spite of the fact that Mr. Blaine is not a candidate, "his name will not down," and that in nearly all the meetings of county committees held this week informal votes have shown that Blaine is eight or ten or a dozen times as strong as any other candidate. The reasons for his great strength are not given, but we presume his devotion to literary labors for five hours every forenoon and his habit of going to bed early have had a good deal to do with it. Then, too, his uncompromising position in favor of protection cannot fail to help him in a state in which, as the Press solemnly assures, "even the waters are angry," and are at this moment rising in indignation against the Morrison tariff bill.

FITZ JOHN PORTER.

Chicago Tribune.

The Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette, which has all along advocated the cause of Fitz John Porter, once more comes to his rescue, goes over the miserable story of those August days in 1862, and produces its diagrams to show that Porter was justified in disobeying the orders of Pope, though it defeats its own purpose when it acknowledges that "Porter seems to have been slow in coming up," and that "Pope had a desperate enterprise on hand, but hoped to catch Jackson and beat him before Longstreet came." That is exactly what he would have done had Porter obeyed orders. Longstreet then would no have been on his (Porter's) flank, but would have met the combined forces of Pope and Porter, who would meanwhile have crushed Jackson. General Pope's plan was an excellent one. Had he had the assistance which he should have had from McClellan and Franklin on the one hand, and which he repeatedly called for, but which never came, and of Porter on the other, as he had ordered, he would have crushed the forces of Jackson and Longstreet separately. Had Porter marched as Pope wanted he would have been on the flank of Jackson and co-operating with Pope. Their joint force of 47,000 men would have overwhelmed Jackson's 22,000 and then turned and routed Longstreet's 25,000. But Porter, as the Commercial-Gazette says, "seems to have been slow in coming up." The muddy roads and the dark night made no difference to him. He made the communication with Jackson and got on Porter's flank because Porter waited for him to do so, whereas Porter at that time should have been moving with Pope against him, Jackson already having been cleared out of the way. As it eventuated Pope, lying between Porter and Franklin, with no help from either, might as well have been between two rebel corps.

THE LONDON TIMES.

New York World.

The death of Thomas Chenery, the editor of the London Times, is announced. Mr. Chenery was 58 years of age. He was born in Barbadoes, and at the time he succeeded Mr Delane as editor of the Times had just given up the professorship of Arabic at Oxford. He was celebrated for his extensive knowledge, but was not regarded as a thorough journalist. He had learning but no practical knowledge, and the Times under his editorship has steadily lost ground. Of the London newspapers it is fourth or fifth now in the matter of circulation, and its advertising patronage—the bulwark of the concern—is beginning to show decadence. The Times is unable to keep up with the modern journalistic competition, and unless new blood is infused into it another generation will find it far in the object rear. And yet the Times was once thought to be the newspaper Gibraltar as well as the thunderer of the world. The people who were attached to it are dying off, and the new constituencies are being gathered by the more active and incisive journals.

OUR NATIONAL DISGRACE.

Boston Globe.

Under our wise and beneficent laws, an American citizen is forbidden to purchase a foreign-built ship, no matter how advantageous it might be to him in the carrying trade. No foreign-built vessel can get an American register, and it is not lawful for such a vessel to sail under the American flag. Such is the law for the citizen, but there is no law for the government, perhaps because the government, like the king, can do no wrong. We are spending millions of dollars a year to keep up an ostensible navy, but when we need a seaworthy ship to send to the polar seas we find that there is not one such vessel owned by the United States. We are compelled to apply to the British shipowners and the British admiralty. And then we find that a stanch British vessel can be bought for less than it costs to tin-plate one of our scows-of-war. It would be money in the pocket of this government to hire somebody to tow our navy out to sea and scuttle it.

GROSS MISREPRESENTATION.

The Albany Democrat, in an article on the Northern Pacific land grant, remarks:

THE OREGONIAN says that the boards of trade as representing the mercantile classes have yet donned congress to not proceed against this grant. That paper is of the opinion that the body of the people of Oregon and Washington territory are opposed to any further favors being granted to the company, but that they would oppose any effort to deprive the company of any just right which they possess. THE OREGONIAN, however, takes the position that the company has an equitable right to the unearned part of the grant. Those conversant with THE OREGONIAN and the manner in which that paper is conducted, will not be surprised that that journal takes sides with the corporation as against the people.

This is a gross and no doubt intentional misrepresentation of the position of THE OREGONIAN. What this journal actually said was just this, viz:

Under the grants the Northern Pacific Company failed to comply with the stipulations as to time, and congress had the right to declare the lands forfeited. But no forfeiture was declared; the company went on in good faith to build the larger portion of the road, and ultimately succeeded. "The question now arises whether congress has the power to forfeit lands actually earned in the prosecution of the work, after the time stipulated in the charter had lapsed, congress having in the meantime declared no forfeiture? And even if it should be declared legal to withhold the lands, would it be equitable to do so? * * This journal believes that the company now has equities so far as the road has been built. As to the remainder, or unearned portion, of the grant, it is simply a question whether the country would be benefited the more by declaring it forfeit, or by extending the time. The portion lying in Oregon ought, undoubtedly, to be released at once, since there is no probability that the road will ever be built from Wallula to Portland, nor is there any need of it. Of the grant for the Cascade mountain division this is to be said, that many persons in both sections of Washington territory want the road, and they would take it as proof of hostility on the part of Oregon to their interests if an influence from this state should be exerted for forfeiture of the grant. The desire of commercial development there may as yet be in the ascendant over the anti-monopoly feeling; but it would be as much a mistake to accept the resolutions of a board of trade in Walla Walla or Seattle as an expression of the views of the people of Washington territory at large as to suppose that the board of trade of Portland, the organ of the banking and mercantile classes, represents the views of a majority of the people of Oregon on railroad questions or the mortgage tax law.

It will be seen that the Democrat's misrepresentation is complete and without excuse. The paper appears to be one of three or four which evidently take it to be their principal "mission" as newspapers to carp and snarl at THE OREGONIAN, and when all else fails, to lie about it.

THE PRESIDENCY.

Chicago Secures the Democratic National Convention.

JULY 8 FINALLY CHOSEN AS THE DATE.

The Sage of Gramercy Interviewed by a Californian—The Greenbackers Hold their Convention at Indianapolis.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The democratic national committee is just up in the quiet of ... [illegible] ... for holding the presidential convention. There is a strong feeling against admitting reporters ... [illegible] ... it is reported ... [illegible]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The democratic national committee met at ... o'clock to-day at the Arlington hotel. The meeting was called to order with closed doors. When the committee had been called to order the request of ... to admit to the next convention a delegate from ... was considered, and it was resolved that each territory be allowed to send two delegates to the convention, the question of admission to be determined by the convention.

The question of the proper date of holding the convention was then taken up, and a wide diversity of opinion was manifested on the subject, the members favoring dates from the latter part of May to August 5. By a vote of twenty-one to seventeen the committee rejected the motion to hold the convention, May 21, and a proposition to select Tuesday, June 24 was agreed to, twenty-three to fifteen.

CHICAGO SELECTED.

Delegations were then heard in support of the claims of various cities as the place for holding the convention. F. S. Ward spoke for Baltimore, Judge Follett for Cincinnati, Carter Harrison for Chicago, R. S. Willis for Louisville, Senator Vest for St. Louis and Hewitt for Saratoga. About two hours were occupied in hearing these arguments, and the first ballot was not taken until 4:30. It resulted as follows: Chicago 13, St. Louis 11, Saratoga 5, Louisville 5, Cincinnati 1, Baltimore none.

Louisville was withdrawn and another ballot taken with the following result: Chicago 19, St. Louis 17, Saratoga 3.

The third ballot was taken immediately and resulted in the selection of Chicago as the place for holding the convention, the vote being Chicago 21, St. Louis 17.

The committee then reconsidered the vote by which June 24 was fixed as the time of holding the convention, and agreed upon July 8 next instead.

THE CALL.

The following call was presented: "The executive committee having met at the city of Washington on the 22d of February, 1884, has appointed Tuesday the 8th of July next, as the time, and has chosen the city of Chicago as the place for holding the national democratic convention. Each state is entitled to representation therein equal to double the number of senators and representatives in the congress of the United States. Democrats in each organized territory and the District of Columbia are invited to send two delegates, subject to decision of the convention as to their admission. All citizens of the United States, irrespective of political associations and differences, who can unite with us in an effort for a pure, economical and constitutional government, are cordially invited to join in sending delegates to the convention." The call is signed by all the members of the national democratic committee.

On motion of McHenry of Kentucky it was resolved that the next meeting of the committee be held at the Palmer house in Chicago, July 7. The committee then adjourned.

THE OLD TICKET.

General Clunie Interviews Mr. Tilden, who Says he will Accept the Nomination.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—General Thomas J. Clunie returned last evening from his eastern trip, and was met by a large delegation of political friends, and with them he sat down to a general talk. In the course of which he said: "When I went east I was determined that I would hear from Mr. Tilden's own lips just how he stood on the president question. Quite a number of prominent democrats here had sent letters to Mr. Tilden, telling him I was coming. On my way I went into Wisconsin, Iowa and Connecticut, and up into Butler's kingdom—that's Massachusetts, and nine out of ten of all the democrats I met wanted Tilden and Hendricks over again. When I got to New York I sent my card around to Mr. Tilden, but he was out, and so I went out. When I got back I found a note saying that Mr. Tilden was waiting to see me. I went right round there and found that after waiting an hour he had gone out for a drive. Just after I arrived he returned, and I watched him get out of his carriage. I expected to see, from what I had heard, a decrepit, weak old man, but I didn't. He was straight in figure, with the face that everybody knows, white hair, and a walk that was as quick as could be expected in a man 70 years old. He crossed the sidewalk, went up the steps and flung up his arm for his valet, who ran to him and removed his overcoat. His secretary told him I was waiting, and he at once entered and shook me cordially by the hand."

TILDEN ASKED A PLAIN QUESTION.

"Mr. Clunie," he said, "I am very glad to see you. I had heard of you, and knew you were coming."

"Now, Mr. Tilden," said I, "where I came from we are all for Tilden and Hendricks, and nine out of every ten democrats I have met in the states I have visited think the same. Now I would like to ask and then would like to know, whether you will be a candidate before the next convention?"

"Well, Mr. Clunie, to reform the country after twenty-five years of republican misrule would be a herculean task, and I should prefer to pass the remainder of my days in retirement and quiet."

"Now, you know, that answer didn't satisfy me," continued the general, "for I wanted to know precisely how he thought. There were others out here who wanted to know also. You see my idea is that the democrats won't stand much show this year unless they put up the old ticket, for there are lots of people who believe Tilden and Hendricks were elected. So I said, 'Well, Mr. Tilden, supposing the people want you, will you take the nomination?'

"Well, Mr. Clunie, I don't know. I wouldn't like to disappoint the people as to my ability in this connection, and I should want the people to be sure and make no mistake."

HE GIVES A PLAIN ANSWER.

"But, Mr. Tilden, supposing the national democratic convention should ask you to serve. Would you?"

"Well, Mr. Clunie, I should prefer to remain in quiet, but if the democratic party or the people called upon me I should be willing to aid them to the full extent of my power."

"That satisfied me that Mr. Tilden would take the nomination if he was properly called upon. On my way back I stopped off in Indiana and went to see Governor Hendricks, to find out how he stood. He was in Europe, but I saw his cousin and law partner, A. W. Hendricks. He said he wouldn't bind his cousin by saying anything positive about him but that he was much inclined, and in fact preferred, to remain in private life; but he was quite sure that if the national convention called upon him to take the nomination he would do it, but he would not go into any contest or canvass for it. So you see we can have both Tilden and Hendricks again in the fall."

PRESIDENTIAL PROBABILITIES.

More of the New York Meeting to Canvass the Sentiments of the Republican Party.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—An invitation has been mailed to about 500 republicans in New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Missouri and other states, who will take part in a dinner given by the young republicans of Brooklyn this evening, and by a committee of leading republicans of Boston, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and New York to meet in Mott memorial hall Saturday for consultation on the presidential question. It is not proposed, say the signers of the call, to organize a movement to be in favor of any candidate, but it is hoped that as a result of comparison of views some steps may be taken to give expression to the sentiments of a large number of republicans who believe that the success of the party in the coming presidential contest can be secured only by the nomination of men who are in hearty accord with the principles of administrative reform, and such as will command the unreserved approval and support of independent and thoughtful voters of the United States.

FROM NEW YORK PAPERS.

The Times says of the call: "This preference may not publicly take shape before the Chicago convention, but during the period while it is taking fixed form in the minds of voters and delegates the friends and workers of volunteer candidates and the honor of the nomination will no doubt find their labors discouragingly unfruitful."

The Tribune interviewed Frederick W. Holls, one of the signers of the call, who said: "The proposed conference, so far as it may refer to independent sentiment, will probably indicate to the party the proper and only method by which success can be obtained under the circumstances—that is the nomination of men who will receive the hearty and enthusiastic support of every republican. Mere negative merit is not enough. The machine, particularly in this state, will be reminded of the lesson of 1882."

"Is the movement in the interest of any particular candidate?" was asked.

"Most certainly not. Any attempt to convert it into a boom would be a dismal failure."

"Will the conference be made public?"

"That I can't tell. Admission will be by ticket. If you ask my individual opinion about the nomination of Mr. Arthur, I have no hesitation in saying I should consider it equal to party disaster."

THE LOUISIANA DELEGATION.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—A New Orleans special says: Week after next the Louisiana republican state convention, so called, will be held here. It will be solid for Arthur. Federal office holders absolutely control the convention.

"Who are you likely to send to Chicago?" was asked of Collector Badger.

He smiled a little. "Well, the ticket for delegates is all made up. We always divide evenly between white and colored men. Kellogg and myself will be the two former, while Lemont and Pinchback are the others."

Demont is a naval officer, and Pinchback is surveyor of this port. Other delegates are not fully determined upon, but will be selected by the time the convention meets.

The Times says, editorially: "Louisiana differs from other southern states in regard to republican politics only in the possession of an able boss. Everywhere it is the same. The party organization is the machine of the federal office holders, and is at the command of the head of the federal administration."

PAYNE NOT A CANDIDATE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The Sun's Washington special says: Payne of Ohio being asked if Manitol should secede, and he were president what he would do, replied: "I am not and shall not be a candidate for the presidency. Therefore my opinion on the question can be of no information. Yet if I had formed an opinion I should not hesitate to express it. I fear the Pacific railroad is a huge elephant on its hands. The proposed addition of a fourth or a guarantee is hazardous, and will embarrass it seriously if it does not end in bankruptcy."

THE GREENBACKERS.

They will Hold a National Convention at Indianapolis on May 28.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 22.—Following is the official call for the national greenback labor convention: "A national convention of the national greenback labor party to nominate candidates for president and vice president of the United States, to be voted for at the coming presidential election, will be held in the city of Indianapolis, Indiana, on Wednesday, the 28th of May, 1884. Each state will be entitled to four delegates and four alternates at large; each congressional district to two delegates and two alternates; each territory to two delegates and two alternates, and the district of Columbia to two delegates and two alternates. Therefore all who are in accord with the views set forth in the platform of said party in 1880 are respectfully requested to meet in convention in their several states, territories and districts, on or before May ..., and elect delegates and alternates to said convention."

JAS. CASSIDY, Secretary.

JESSE HARPER, Chairman.

The following nominations were made: Governor, H. Z. Leonard; lieutenant-governor, John B. Milroy; secretary of state, R. T. CITY.

U. S. COURT DECISIONS.—Judge Deady yesterday delivered oral opinions in three cases, a summary of which is appended. In the case of Neff vs. Budd, removed from the state circuit court to the United States court, Neff moved to dismiss. The motion was denied because the record had not yet been filed and the adverse party had till the first of next term to file it. In the case of Lokla Goldsmith vs. Balch, an action at law to recover possession of an undivided five-eighths of the east half of the Balch claim, a motion was made to strike out two allegations from the complaint, one being that "Lokla Goldsmith owned an undivided two-eighths of the property," and the other that "plaintiff had been in adverse possession of the premises for ten years before the commencement of the suit." The motion was allowed as to the first allegation because it was immaterial and as to the second because it was redundant. In the case of Heinrich vs. the Pullman Palace Car Company, a suit to recover damages, a demurrer was filed to a portion of the complaint, alleging that the porter of the car [illegible] the pistol which he left [illegible] wounding the plaintiff, was acting under defendant's orders. The court overruled the demurrer without deciding whether this was or was not a defense, because it was not pleaded separately, and because a demurrer will not go to a portion of an answer. The court also declined to allow the plaintiff leave to strike out the whole answer because the defenses therein were not pleaded separately, and that defendant had leave to file an answer.

GREENHORN VICTIMIZED.—A young man who hailed from California and gave his name as Joseph N. Stark, and who is about as verdant a specimen of humanity as can be imagined, was swindled out of $25 by a sharper last evening. Stark, while waiting at the Ash street ticket office to take passage on the Atlantic express, was approached by a fellow who in the usual style ascertained his name, destination, etc. He then said he had an uncle at Spokane Falls and wished to go there but was dead broke. He had a good gold watch, and if Stark would lend him $25 on it he would go on up to Spokane with him. [illegible] the watch was all right he would let him have the money. The sharper produced an old gold-washed ticker and got Stark to accompany him to a jewelry store on North First street, where he called for acid, which he applied to his watch and showed Stark that it was not affected by it. The latter then gave him $25. The sharper said he must go around to his hotel and get his luggage, and would meet his victim at the ticket office. After several hours had passed, and the rascal did not come back, Stark mentioned the loan to a friend, who pronounced the watch worthless. Policeman Brannan was called upon, who soon concluded that Stark had been duped, but he refused to stay to try and catch the sharper. He said he thought the fellow would not back the money, and if he did not, perhaps his uncle at Spokane would pay it. Perhaps he will.

GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK.—In the office of Captain Lamson, clerk of the U. S. courts, is a venerable timepiece, a regular "My Grandfather's Clock," not such an one as many of the readers of THE OREGONIAN can remember of seeing in their grandfathers' houses in days of long ago. This clock is decidedly "too tall for a shelf," and has stood for over 100 years "on the floor." It has works entirely of wood, except the escapement, and is wound with a cord, but by hauling on cords, hand over hand. It was made by G. Hoadley, Plymouth, Mass., and is a regular old timer, just like the one the cook used to show her lover in when her mistress visited the kitchen. These clocks were to be seen in nearly every farm house in New England forty or fifty years ago, but most of them have long since been placed in garrets or other out of the way places, from which they have been resurrected of late by "bric-a-brac" hunters, who purchase them for a trifle and sell them at fabulous rates to adorn the parlors of the æsthetic. The clock above alluded to was presented to G. G. Cammons, Capt. Lamson's clerk, by his father, who brought it from the east. The owner is puzzled as to what to do with it. It is not big enough for a cottage and not small enough to carry on a watch chain. It is good enough to keep correct hours and it does, but it has never got to running on tick and probably never will, till it stops short, never to run again.

THE OREGON TRADE.—Under this head the San Francisco Merchant publishes the following, which is exceedingly suggestive. Since San Francisco looks at the subject one way Portland might well look at it another: "There is but one serious drawback to our not only retaining but increasing our business relations, as the country fills up, with Oregon and the adjacent territories. The only practicable route is by steamer, and in foggy or tempestuous weather the voyage is not a pleasant nor a very safe one. Moreover, it takes time and money, including the fare and extra hotel expenses at one or both ends of the trip. This necessity of making a sea voyage to reach San Francisco is doing more to build up Portland as a commercial center with metropolitan aspirations than the Northern Pacific railroad. If the California and Oregon railroad was completed to-day, the very heart of the Oregon trade would be as near to us as Los Angeles. The time and fare would be about the same, and all Oregon and the Sound would be our territory. If that railroad is not completed for six or seven years, Portland will in the meantime have made such progress that we cannot expect to make much inroad on her established trade. Time in the construction of this road is of the utmost importance to San Francisco, and it looks like blindness in our merchants to see any obstacle in the way of its immediate construction."

ANIMAL VS. ANIMAL.—The Jefferson street ferry company complain that great injustice was done them by an item which appeared among the East Portland news in THE OREGONIAN of Thursday morning, headed "Cruelty to Animals." The company makes the following statement: The company has not any horse engaged to assist teams up the incline from the Jefferson street ferry boat on the east side, west side or any other side; and such horse is not "made to stand throughout the day, in all kinds of weather, without shelter or covering of any kind," nor is that "animal a sorry looking object, enlisting the sympathy of all who pass that way." Your East Portland reporter is entirely mistaken. The company once had a horse for the purpose referred to, and took good care of him until last April, when the animal was taken from the stable yard in East Portland, in which he was grazing one Sunday evening. Since then the company has spent over $800 in rebuilding its ferry slips and putting them on easier grades, and to-day no other Portland ferry has as easy grades as its landings at the Jefferson street ferry. Your reporter's [illegible] to the company's readiness "to help others up the hill" indicates the animus of those who have undoubtedly prevailed upon him.

LOTS OF BUTTER.—Fresh California butter is making its appearance in this market again at 40 cents per pound. Eastern in tubs is selling at from 25 to 30 cents, according to the amount of lard it contains. There is no attempt made by dealers to conceal the fact that all the eastern packed butter is mixed with lard. California butter will soon be down to two bits per pound, and then the eastern will be driven out of the market for a time at least, as there is plenty of lard here, and by putting a little [illegible] and wearing yellow spectacles one might manage to get along till grass grows. Oregon farmers must take more pains with their butter in future. [illegible] it is that when their butter season comes around the price is low. When butter is dear the cows give no milk, and when eggs are dear the hens are non-producers. These perversities must be remedied. If Illinois farmers can turn out white clover butter when that state is covered with two or three feet of snow, our farmers should learn the trick.

KEEP THE SIDEWALKS CLEAR.—There is considerable complaint concerning the crowds which collect daily at the corners at the intersection of First and Washington streets, and also at other corners on First street. The sidewalks are blocked to the hindrance of passing ladies and to the annoyance of business men. People must remember that Portland is no longer a village, and that it is not permitted to them to obstruct the sidewalks. The attention of the police has been called to this matter and persons who collect in crowds need not be offended if requested to move on. People [illegible] more forcibly their lack of consideration for others and their contempt for all the rules of politeness than by collecting directly in front of a street crossing and causing persons to walk around them. Just such nuisances can be seen at any hour of the day on the corners above alluded to. It is time that it was put a stop to.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN MISSION.—Durand Music hall, corner First and Clay streets, where the United Presbyterian Mission holds its services, has been cleaned and thoroughly renovated by papering, painting and kalsomining. Being on the ground floor and well lighted and heated it is one of the most attractive halls for public service in the city. Rev. Mr. Stevenson will preach in the hall to-morrow and Rev. Mr. Halsey as announced heretofore.

SURVEYING THE ROAD IN THE CITY PARK.—The surveyor's force are engaged in staking the line of the proposed road through the city park. It is probable that a change will be made in the present location which will do away with several sinuosities and make the road shorter.

NEWSPAPER SOLD.—There was filed yesterday in the county clerk's office a bill of sale of everything heretofore belonging to the Northwest News Printing and Publishing Company, and used in the publication of a paper known by that title, to [illegible] Cole, Sr., of St. Louis. The consideration of the sale was the canceling of the three mortgages held by Cole against the paper, which amounted to $17,000, and the payment of $100 in cash. This represents about one-fourth of the money sunk in the establishment. The old company is hereby dissolved. Mr. Gregory, the attorney who represents Cole, Sr.'s interests in the transaction, stated to an OREGONIAN reporter that the paper under the old management had been continually running behind, and he could not afford to sink any more money in it. He would now offer it for sale and a cash bidder could obtain a bargain. Mr. Gregory further stated that negotiations were now pending for the sale of the establishment, but would not say who the probable buyers were. Until the sale is effected it is understood that the paper will be nominally leased to Messrs. Van Reynolds and Bryan, two attaches of the office, and meanwhile the owner will supply the necessary funds to keep life in the moribund concern.

UNINTENTIONAL BURGLARY.—J. N. Bristol, perfumeryman, met with a rather singular and painful accident on Thursday night. It appears that Mr. Bristol occupies a room over Sealy & Mason's, and that before retiring for the night he went into another room to wash his hands. Accidentally he was locked in, the door having a spring catch. He attempted to regain his room by getting out of the window and passing along a ledge to the window of his own room, in attempting to reach which he lost his hold and fell backward through a skylight into the premises of Sealy & Mason. He fell about sixteen feet, and fortunately escaped without any external injuries, but received a severe shaking up. Just whether he has succeeded in convincing the opposition firm that the burglary was not premeditated is not known. Mr. Bristol was able to be at his store yesterday, but was not in a condition to do any work.

DESERVED MORE THAN A THRESHING.—John S. [illegible], formerly a letter carrier, has not been seen of late, and is either in hiding or has quit the city. It seems that one Welter placed his little nephew, [illegible] five years of age, to board at Cuker's, thinking he would be well cared for. A short time since Welter took the little fellow to visit his grandmother, and when the time came for him to go back to Cuker's he did not wish to return. Inquiry as to the reason elicited the statement that Cuker had been guilty of brutal habits in the presence of the child. A person called on Cuker in regard to the matter, and it is said he acknowledged [illegible] was given a threshing, a warrant was issued for his arrest, but the officers were not able to find him. Mrs. Cuker appeared in the justice court to ask a warrant for the arrest of the officers, who in searching for her husband had, she alleged, broken a door.

THREW UP HIS JOB.—Policeman Flynn has thrown up his commission and resigned his star, in other words, resigned from the police force. He is probably sorry that he did not do so sooner. He has been obliged ever since the appointment of the present chief of police to act as a sort of private secretary to him, and the work he was obliged to do became so disgusting that he concluded to resign. Instead of being allowed to attend to the duties for which he was paid by the city he has been kept trotting around interviewing prostitutes, etc., and preparing affidavits. Watkinds has long been known as the great affidavit man, and it is thought he has now a great stock on hand. He now needs an organ in which to publish them and, if a suitable one is for sale cheap he may succeed in supplying a long felt want. Ah, there's music in the air.

FIRST RUN OF SMELT.—Notice was received here yesterday that the first lot of Columbia river smelt of this season's catch would arrive on the Fleetwood. Fish dealers and fish eaters were delighted, and a number of the former collected at the wharf to look after the little fish. There were only sixteen bushel boxes, sent up by W. Hume, for which a round price was asked. The entire lot was purchased by Malarkey, he paying something over $100 for them. Those who can afford it will have smelt for breakfast, and those who cannot will have to be content with a smell. In a few days these delicious fish will be supplied in quantities, and at prices to suit all.

POLICE COURT.—W. B. McCrary was held to answer for stealing a coat belonging to Charles Perkins from the American Exchange. Vincent Capoitte was arraigned on a charge of stealing a box of eggs from Mendenhall's market. The only witness was a bright little lad of six summers, who was allowed to testify and who told a straight story. Counsellor Campbell, who appeared for the defense, thought the lad about his size and tried to confuse him, but failed. Several parties swore that Capoitte was not near Mendenhall's at the time the theft was committed. The judge reserved his decision.

HUNTING EXCURSION.—Owing to unfavorable weather and the eccentric conduct of the ducks the sportsmen of this city have not done much in the way of hunting this winter. Word having been received here that the canvasbacks and teal ducks are coming in in large numbers since the breakup of the frost, the hunters have determined to have a field day to-morrow, and have accordingly chartered the steamer Calliope. Those who can get up early enough will take passage from the foot of Morrison street at 4 o'clock in the morning. A barge will be provided to carry the ducks if necessary.

BAD FALL.—George W. Prindle, one of the pressmen in THE OREGONIAN office, met with a very painful accident yesterday afternoon. He had ascended a ladder to oil the shafting attached to the ceiling of the press room. The floor being slick with oil the feet of the ladder slipped and Prindle fell, striking his face on the frame of one of the presses, cutting a gash under his left eye and slightly fracturing the bone over the inner corner of the eye. The eye fortunately escaped injury.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SERVICE.—To-morrow is the sixteenth anniversary of the Sunday school of the Unitarian church of this city. This will be commemorated by a special service at the church in the evening. The exercises which have been arranged by members of the Sunday school will consist of the reports of the officers, singing by the children, recitations and an address. The public are cordially invited.

WANTS HIS MONEY.—Nelson Bennet, the contractor on the Yakima division of the N. P. R. R., for whom the $10,000 shipped to Ainsworth by Ladd & Tilton through the Northern Pacific Express company was intended, but which was stolen at Ainsworth, has commenced suit against the express company to recover the money. Messrs. Williams, Hill, Durham and Thompson have been retained for the prosecution.

THE MOTHER GOOSE ENTERTAINMENT.—In obedience to a general desire the box plan of the theater will be open at Cornelius' to-day and reserved seats can be obtained for the Mother Goose entertainment without extra charge.

ARRESTED FOR ARSON.

A Railroad Detective from Nevada Arrives in Search of a Man Whom he Captures, Aided by Local Officers.

Ed White of this city was arrested by Marshal Libville yesterday afternoon upon a requisition for the commission of arson in Nevada. It appears a stage robbery was committed in that state some time since, the perpetrators of which were known to White, and a reward being offered he peached on them and divided the reward with the sheriff. Upon the conviction of the stage robbers, they in turn peached on White for burning a bridge, which it appears was included in the plans for the stage robbery, so that White was black as the others in the crime. Meanwhile White had flown, and the sheriff hearing he had taken this course secured a requisition and forwarded it to Detective Barry of Portland. Not finding the man, Detective T. F. Burke of the Central Pacific road was sent out and arrived here yesterday. He consulted with Marshal Libville, who soon secured the arrest of White. The latter was turned over to Officer Barry and was placed in the city jail awaiting return to Nevada by next steamer.

White professed complete innocence of any cause for arrest until confronted by the detective, when he "gave himself away" by hastily volunteering the remark that he had nothing to do with burning the bridge, as he was in Truckee at the time.

White is well known here, his parents having resided here for some time.

PERSONAL.

The assistant secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Clark Davis, is prostrated by a severe congestive chill.

Rev. E. Trumbull Lee, pastor of the Calvary Presbyterian church, is absent from the city on presbyterial appointment and his pulpit will be filled to-morrow by the Rev. J. H. Acton.

Captain Alexander, the popular commander of the Queen of the Pacific, so well known to the traveling public, has again resumed command of his splendid vessel. Owing to a very severe and protracted attack of sickness Captain Alexander was compelled to relinquish command of the Queen for several months. On the last trip of the steamer from San Francisco to sound ports he took his old place on the "bridge." His many friends will be pleased to learn of his complete restoration to health.

BRIEF MENTION.

The State of California arrived in port yesterday afternoon.

Portland Band of Hope No. 1 will meet this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the hall of the W. C. T. U. on Washington street, between Front and First. All children are cordially invited.

The Young Men's Christian Association hold a religious meeting for young men this evening in their parlor, commencing at 7:30 o'clock. Young men are cordially invited. Next Tuesday evening a young men's social will be held.

Enterprise.

Speaking of leading business houses on First street we'll mention the firm of [illegible], the oldest and largest boot and shoe store, number 92 First. He has watched the growth and prosperity of the city and always taken an active part in its welfare. This firm has been holding a special clearance sale for some time and are about drawing it to a close. It is his intention to make a radical change in his immense establishment, and as the sale lasts only a few days longer no doubt many will take advantage of this golden opportunity.

Reopened.

Passing down First st., near Taylor, one may notice changes at business houses, in particular, the New York Boot and Shoe Store, which had been closed for some time past, has been reopened by Mr. M. [illegible], formerly of No. 111 Front street. Judging by the appearance of his window and general activity about the store, it is quite evident he is obtaining his share of patronage, notwithstanding the dull times here in the city just at present.

Smelt.

Once more these delicious fish are in the market, and Malarkey wants every one of his patrons to know that he has them in quantities to suit, at his market, Fourth and Morrison.

S. M. BARR

is now holding a clearance sale of his entire stock of boots and shoes, worth [illegible], [illegible] Third st.

Go to W. E. Berger, the sign and ornamental painter, [illegible] Washington st. Best work in the city, at reasonable rates.

WILLFUL MURDER.

Such is the Verdict of the Jury in the Murray Trial.

THE PRISONER BECOMES SUDDENLY SANE.

He Betrays Considerable Suppressed Excitement When the Result is Announced—Sentence Postponed till Wednesday Next.

Considerable speculation was rife in the city yesterday morning when it was learned that the jury in the Murray trial had returned a sealed verdict during the previous night. The length of time which they had found necessary in order to agree was construed by many as an evidence that the jury had not gone to either extreme. That is, that the verdict did not acquit the prisoner on the ground of insanity, neither did it find him guilty of willful murder, but rather that a verdict of manslaughter or murder in the second degree had been found. Conversation upon the matter turned much on the [illegible] among the crowd that had gathered every morning at the court house during the last eleven days. Long before the hour for [illegible] to open the court [illegible] was filled with these conversations. Just before the judge entered the prisoner Murray was brought in by Jailer [illegible] and took his seat [illegible] by the side of his attorneys. He had learned that the jury had agreed upon a sealed verdict and the announcement had not tended to quiet his nerves. One fact was very apparent. Murray either forgot to keep up his assumed state of insanity, or else he did not care to do so longer, now that his fate was surely decided. He held his head up and glanced furtively around the room after he had taken his seat. The expression of his face was not [illegible]. He looked nervously with the [illegible] and [illegible] his chin during the [illegible] interval of waiting.

[illegible]

When Judge Smith took his seat the court room [illegible] to be a perfect sea of upturned faces. Clerk Marshall read the minutes of the previous day's session, [illegible] the prisoner's [illegible]. The crowd also were pressing forward. There was a moment's silence, which was broken by Judge Smith saying to Sheriff Sears: "You may bring in the jury." A flutter of excitement ran through the vast audience, and Murray [illegible] nervously up and down, as if just coming to his senses or awakening from some horrible dream. The jury quickly and quietly filed in, took their seats and their names being called, all were found to be present. "Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict," asked Judge Smith. "Yes, your Honor," responded the foreman, and he handed it to the judge. Breathless anxiety and suspense were now portrayed in every face in the audience. Murray's discomfiture was telling upon him. His face and hands twitched, the former scarcely any, the latter considerably. The judge hastily scanned the verdict, his eyes revealing to one who studied his countenance what the awful truth concerning Murray's fate was to be. He handed the verdict to Clerk Marshall. Murray was told to stand up. He arose and straightened himself with evident weakness and effort, and the clerk read, while a silence painful and oppressive, like that which comes over one in the presence of death itself, pervaded the great hall.

THE VERDICT.

In the circuit court, of the state of Oregon, for the county of Multnomah: State of Oregon vs. J. W. Murray: We, the jury in the above entitled action, find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree.

F. M. COLEMAN, Foreman.

The last word had scarcely left the clerk's lips before Murray, the hot blood mounting high in his temples, sank back in his chair. There was something like a great sigh of satisfaction rose up from the crowd, although nearly all the speculations of the morning were now shown to have been misjudgments as to the convictions of those twelve men who had sworn to do justice. But, although Murray was evidently expecting a more favorable verdict, and was for the moment completely stunned at the thought of death upon the gallows, he did not again relapse into his former appearance of imbecility. He was now wide awake to everything that was going on around him, and glanced almost appealingly at his attorneys, as if searching for one spark of hope. Then he looked squarely at the jury, as if thinking, "Well, you have done your worst, and now that it is all over it's little I care." The court addressed himself to Mr. [illegible] regarding the time for passing sentence upon the prisoner. The attorney stated that he would like to have it postponed for a few days, and the judge accordingly named Wednesday next for that purpose. In another moment Murray, the murderer, closely guarded by two officers, passed out of the court room and down the stairs into the jail, where the door of his iron cell once more closed upon him. Ten minutes later the court room was cleared and the crowd was dispersing in every direction throughout the city.

Murray Interviewed.

Later in the day a reporter visited Murray in his cell. After passing the compliments of the day the reporter asked:

"Well, how do you take the verdict, Mr. Murray, and what do you think about it?"

Murray grew very uneasy, and moved quickly back from the iron bars through which he had been peering, coming to a sitting posture, and [illegible]. He managed to reply, however, much quicker than it has taken to write it here.

"I take it well enough, I suppose—same as I would anything else. Only way I can," all the time sitting uneasily.

"Was the verdict a surprise to you?"

"Yes, I did not expect it to end that way. Yes, it was unexpected."

"Did you look for an acquittal?"

Here he evidently thought it best to keep up a certain show of [illegible] consistent with his assumed character in court. He replied:

"I don't know. Had not thought about it, nor given it much attention—don't know as I thought much about it—but I did not expect that verdict brought in."

"Have you, in view of your impending sentence next Wednesday, any statement you would like to make to the press?"

Murray said he had nothing now, and believed he had nothing more to say concerning the matter. He repeated that the verdict was a surprise to him, and that he expected something else. There was nothing in his demeanor to indicate that he was laboring under a mental delusion. He was very nervous, but that was to be expected after the terrible strain he [illegible] the trial was over.

THE WEATHER.

River Rising Steadily at all Points up the Valley—The Columbia and Snake still Blocked by Ice—Delay to Trains.

Yesterday was an average day for Oregon, there being the usual mixture of wind, rain and sunshine. The air was comfortably warm. During the past twenty-four hours the river rose one foot and is now a little more than eighteen feet six inches above low water mark. This is still five feet below the level of the lower floor of the First street wharf. Great trees and driftwood of every description have been floating past the city in large numbers and have been a source of considerable annoyance to steamboatmen. The Stark street ferry, which runs the boat until after midnight, made the regular trips as usual, being [illegible] with great caution, [illegible] The [illegible] first vessels leaving here after the short ice blockade was raised.

CORVALLIS, Feb. 22—[illegible] A. M.—The river has risen [illegible] during the preceding thirty-six hours, and is now [illegible] feet above low water. Rising slowly [illegible] hour.

The Inland Empire.

All over eastern Oregon the weather was mild yesterday, the mercury at 8 A. M. ranging from [illegible] to [illegible] degrees. At Riparia a chinook was blowing and the temperature was 50 degrees. The river there was at low water mark and rising. At 5 P. M. it had risen a foot. At The Dalles three inches of snow fell on Thursday night. At Celilo at 5 P. M. the river was two feet eleven inches above low water mark, and at Bonneville seven feet ten inches above. The Columbia river above the mouth of the Deschutes and the Snake river are still closed by ice, but as both rivers are rising slowly navigation will probably be resumed early next week.

COUNTY SARCASTIC.—On returning from Astoria yesterday Epicurus Jones exhibited a number of beautiful little fish to his better half. "What are they?" she asked. "The Columbia river smelt," he replied. Miss Josephine Jones, sitting at the piano, on hearing the remark said, "Did it smell bad, papa?" "Not half as bad as that dude who comes here to see you," was the reply, and the young lady started up "The Maiden's Prayer" to hide her confusion.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

A Parade by the First Battalion, Oregon State Militia.

ENTERTAINMENTS AND BALLS IN THE EVENING.

The Athletic Tournament at Mechanics' Pavilion Well Attended—the Flags Hung Out in Honor of the Day.

Washington's Birthday was remembered in this city and something of the nature of a celebration occurred. Flags appeared floating at the masts of shipping, on the buildings, business blocks and private dwellings, and the clear air, which prevailed during the greater portion of the day, presented a fine appearance. Foreign vessels and consulates [illegible] in the remembrance of the day, and [illegible] their nations' ensigns to the breeze.

[illegible] First Battalion, Oregon state militia, [illegible]. Although the [illegible] and it was strictly [illegible] newly purchased [illegible]. The companies who participated in the parade were Company A, Washington Guard, Capt. Horace [illegible]; Company B, Emmett Guard, Capt. [illegible]; Company F, East Portland City Guard, Capt. John M. [illegible]; and Company G, Capt. Forrest.

The line formed on Alder street with the right resting on Fourth. The column moved up Fourth to Jefferson, up Jefferson to Sixth, up Sixth to Mill, down Mill to First, down First to B, up B to Sixth, up Sixth to Morrison, down Morrison to Fourth and back to Alder, where the line was broken. Company G, sometimes called the "Cadet company, or Portland's pets," is composed of as nice a set of young fellows as one would find, and although recently organized and having had only thirteen drills, they made by far the best appearance in the parade. They turned out the largest number of [illegible] and the orders of the commanding officer were in every case obeyed with [illegible] and precision. Washington Guard was quite unable to [illegible] twenty-five men when they have over sixty in their [illegible], but the new uniforms which they expected [illegible] were not finished, and [illegible] disappointment of having [illegible] the parade in citizen's clothes.

The Athletic Exhibition.

The entertainment given by the Portland Athletic club at the Mechanics' pavilion last evening was well attended. Generally little interest is shown in these exhibitions other than that presented by the athletes. The club is composed of a number of Portland's younger yet best athletes. The exhibition partook much of the character of outdoor sports as the ample space in the pavilion gave sufficient room. The programme embraced gymnastic sports and exercises, races, hurdle racing, boxing, wrestling and tug of war.

[illegible] yard race over eight hurdles [illegible] the hurdle race.

The boxing [illegible] between [illegible] Garrell and Malarkey and Campbell was quite as interesting as [illegible] furnished.

A. M. Donaldson made a running high jump of five feet two inches.

J. McGrath gave an exhibition of club swinging.

The [illegible] race was won by [illegible] Manion.

The wrestling bout between Reid and Campbell was warmly contested, Reid winning the first fall and Campbell the second.

The [illegible] was won by J. S. Dunbar.

[illegible] Sprague won the half mile race, Manion a close second.

The potato race caused much merriment, C. Smith [illegible] in the shortest time. The evening's [illegible] closed with the tug of war between [illegible] The Anglos won the pull.

[illegible] the affair was the best of the kind ever given here and far more worthy of the [illegible] than the Donald Dinnie or [illegible] Sullivan entertainments.

Washington Guard Ball.

In the evening the members of the Washington Guard held their twenty-third annual ball at Academy hall, corner Second and Salmon streets. There was a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen and a most enjoyable time was had. Dancing was indulged until a very late hour, and all went away from the ball room wishing that the entertainments given by the guard were more frequent than annually.

Entertainment by the P. O. S. of A.

The entertainment and ball given by Camps Nos. [illegible], P. O. S. of A., at [illegible] hall in East Portland last evening, was one of the most enjoyable social gatherings that ever occurred in the city. A large number of visiting members from other states were present. The entire affair [illegible] the efforts of those who helped to make the event long to be remembered. The address of S. C. [illegible] was interesting and patriotic, befitting the day we celebrate. By request, Mrs. [illegible] sang a [illegible] which [illegible] applause. It is unnecessary to praise the various committees, as the result speaks for itself.

Yesterday afternoon as Mr. Charles Hague was sitting in the office of his pork packing establishment, corner [illegible] and Third streets, and also while a workman was employed in a room at the rear of the building, a couple of boys stealthily entered the latter and tapped the till, which, however, contained only two or three dollars at the time, but this they secured and hastily decamped. Mr. Hague heard the jingle of the money, and going to see the cause, the matter was readily explained by his observing the money drawer open at one end of the shop and the boys flying out of the door at the other. In one of our city schools the other day, the class in English grammar was discussing the difference between the words "like" and "love." "Now," said the teacher, "we can like a tomato, but is it proper to say we can love a tomato?" "No, it is not," said a fresh young miss, "one can not love a tomato." "Why not?" inquired the teacher. "Because, you know, you cannot—you can't—well, you can't hug a tomato."

TOO MUCH PROTECTION.

LAFAYETTE, Or., Feb. 21, 1884.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I have been reading that essay of Mr. Wm. Bates in the DAILY OREGONIAN of the 20th inst., and would like to notice one of his points in which he makes a very important item. Mr. Bates quotes from a former writer that "No American ship builder, who is compelled to pay 40 to 50 per cent. tariff tax higher prices than the Englishman pays for his materials can compete with that Englishman," and adds the information that "the cost of labor is by far the greater element of cost than the material." Now, if "the laborer did not have to wear protected clothes and eat protected food and use protected tools and sleep under protected blankets, he evidently could work for 40 to 50 per cent. less wages and still be just as well off as now. So of the farmer. They pay on average of 50 per cent. more for all the manufactured goods, clothes, tools and machinery, and also labor which they use, and if this tax was taken off they evidently could sell wheat at fifty cents and [illegible] as much as they now can at eighty or ninety cents. Then [illegible] for the mechanic can make tools and other things a little cheaper if he gets his bread cheaper, etc. The wool grower is kicking now for more protection. If he gets it it will be a [illegible] for him, but how will it be for the other [illegible] American citizens? The fact of the case is that protection robs the many for the benefit of a few, and the farmer of America pays the fiddler at last. And yet we can't think of any way to [illegible]. If we could, would it not be a glorious thing for us all to be protected against each other, and all of us against everybody, and thus avoid [illegible]. In the language of Shakespeare, "What fools these mortals be!" One of the mortals aforesaid.

STATE TEMPERANCE ALLIANCE.

Concluding their Labors Yesterday—Resolutions Encouraging the Lecturer in his Work—Another Party Organized.

The Alliance assembled yesterday morning, Dr. Watts, president, in the chair.

Prayer was made by Rev. T. L. Eliot.

Rev. E. S. Hines tendered his resignation as one of the state lecturers of the Alliance.

The finance committee submitted the following resolutions:

For the better understanding of the relations subsisting between the Alliance and the state lecturer—Dr. Watts—to relieve his mind as to our most hearty support in his arduous labors and to convince the world of our sincerity and business good sense, this Alliance does hereby resolve:

1. That Dr. Watts shall receive, while laboring in the interests of this Alliance, one hundred dollars per month and his expenses, and our executive committee are hereby instructed to make settlement at the close of each month out of funds in hands, taking receipt for the same.

2. That in all churches, societies and meetings where Dr. Watts shall lecture in the interest of temperance they shall take collections or solicit material aid in such ways as the friends of temperance in those localities shall deem best, promptly reporting the amounts thus raised to the executive committee of this Alliance. The monies thus raised may be immediately applied by the lecturer to defray his expenses provided the amounts raised are not in excess of their dues and provided they promptly return to the committee vouchers for monies thus appropriated, and any surplus in their hands.

3. That this Alliance urges upon the executive and finance committees to use their utmost exertions to keep the treasury replenished to supply revenue which the state lecturer shall be free [illegible] to prosecute his work.

4. That this Alliance earnestly solicits the cooperation of pastors, churches, Sunday-schools, temperance organizations and good people everywhere to facilitate the work of our lecturer, and if possible to arrange in our larger cities that they may have access to two or more churches on the same day. Pastors are especially invited to make such arrangements as shall be convenient to them and when so made to duly notify our state lecturer.

The discussion on the subject matter of these resolutions took up the morning session and the fact was developed that Dr. Watts has been invited at a salary of $300 a month to go to California and work in the interest of the cause in that state, but he preferred to labor in Oregon if the Alliance wants him, at a salary of $100 a month and expenses. The debate on ways and means for the prosecution of the work and keeping Dr. Watts in the lecture field took a wide range, and finally when action was taken the resolutions were finally voted upon and lost.

Mr. A. M. Smith offered the following, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the executive committee be instructed to employ Dr. Watts from now until the meeting of the next Alliance on his proposition of $100 per month, and that $250 be allowed him for past services not provided for as stated in his report.

Dr. Watts took occasion as a matter of privilege to call the attention to a report of the proceedings which appeared in the Standard of this morning, which said that "he complained that the publication of his annual report in THE OREGONIAN was not correct." He desired to say that he felt very grateful to the daily press of this city for their full reports of the proceedings of this Alliance, and THE OREGONIAN in particular. He had never complained of the report as published in this paper, and he had said nothing that could have been remotely construed as reflecting on the paper in any way or upon its very fair and full reports.

ORGANIZING ANOTHER PARTY.

During the noon recess and just before the reassembling of the Alliance for the afternoon, several members of that body who were dissatisfied with the action in refusing to immediately affiliate with the national home protection and prohibition party, gathered in one corner of the hall and effected a temporary organization by calling C. W. Dimmick, of Marion, to the chair, and J. E. Houston, of Linn, was appointed secretary. Among those present were Messrs. King and Webb, state lecturers of the I. O. G. T., Rev. S. P. Wilson, E. M. Turner, Mr. Lambert, Rev. Messrs. Crozier, Evon and others.

Mr. Houston read the call and pledge of the national prohibition party, and on his motion it was endorsed by the meeting, those so voting thus agreeing to cut loose from both the republican and democratic parties, and work and vote only with the new party.

Messrs. Houston, Lambert and Dimmick were appointed a temporary executive committee for the new party, with power to call a convention to select delegates to the national convention, if thought best.

Rev. J. W. Webb was appointed a committee to prepare a pledge and call and circulate the same through the Alliance this afternoon for signatures.

The meeting then adjourned.

The Alliance assembled in the afternoon at 1:30, and after some unimportant deliberations closing its labors, the meeting adjourned.

MR. VANDERBILT'S PICTURES.

A Visit to the Private Gallery in Which are Art Objects that Cost Millions.

New York Letter to the Omaha Herald.

A pressure of my finger on a tiny button doubtless rang a bell by electricity, though the quickness with which a man servant came out suggested that the wire was attached to his heels. He was a flunky of the English pattern. I passed at once into the picture galleries. There are two of them, adjoining, and each is something like fifty by seventy-five feet in floor area, with a height equal to two or three stories of an ordinary house. About two hundred visitors were present during the afternoon which I spent there and I did not detect one instance of prying audacity.

The pictures are all modern and chiefly French, the names of the painters include every artist of contemporary fame, the subjects are almost always attractive to a lover of decent beauty, there being no examples of horror and repulsiveness. For instance, his Turner is a partially clear and measurably perfected view of a mystic valley full of lounging persons, the title being "The Fountain of Indolence." His Detaille has to be a war piece, of course, but there is no death or carnage in it. His Alma Tademas lack grotesqueness and his Bouguereau is a woman "On the Way to the Bath," not after she has disrobed there.

Mr. Vanderbilt came into the gallery for a few minutes and chatted in an off hand way with acquaintances and others. I took occasion to talk with him on the subject of the extensive frauds lately discovered in Parisian art traffic. "There's big rascally business done in that line in Paris," he said, "and I don't know that any buyer who deals with the merchants can ever be sure that his pictures are what they pretend to be. America seems a good ways off to those fellows, and once a bogus painting has been sent across the Atlantic they naturally feel pretty safe about it."

He does not give the aggregate cost of the collection, but the sum cannot be less than three millions. In a conspicuous corner is a portrait of himself. The canvas is only ten inches by thirteen. The likeness is excellent. The plentiful small wrinkles in the rich man's face are shown with fidelity, the crow's feet around the little, twinkling eyes are all there in miniature and there is in no respect the slightest idealization of the coarse features. It is the work of the highly fashionable Meissonier. How much do you suppose was paid for it? Twenty thousand dollars. And no flattery thrown in at that!

The Constitution of a Nation Burned up.

St. James' Gazette, Dec 8.

Belgium, the freest and best-governed country on the continent of Europe, is for the present without a constitution, the charter of 1830, together with all the papers relating to Belgian independence, having been destroyed in the fire which has burned to the ground the chamber of representatives. The case is unprecedented and it will be interesting to see in what manner the nation will readopt the act. Fortunately, one may say without undue emphasis, the Belgian constitution is written in the hearts of the people; and the Belgians, after all, are in no worse position than the English who also have no constitution in documentary form. The only other country which was ever deprived of its constitution at one blow was Poland. The Polish constitution of the year 1815 was seized bodily by the troops of the emperor Nicholas, after the suppression of the insurrection of 1830, and carried away, rolled up and enclosed in a japanned tin case, to be exhibited at Moscow in a museum of curiosities, where it is still to be seen.

Paul Lindau, one of Germany's foremost journalists, accompanied the Villard excursion and spike driving party, and has of course written letters containing his observations. He paid special attention to the noted persons who were among Villard's guests. In speaking of General Grant he says: "He is the opposite of all which can be called elegant. He is barely of medium hight, heavy set, with broad shoulders; his motions are slow, languid and awkward. His head is thick and anything but imposing. He wears a full beard, cropped short. Forehead and eyes are meaningless and special characteristics are wanting entirely."

IRISH NATIONALITY AND IRISH PATRIOTS.

PORTLAND, Feb. 21.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

The presence in this city within the last few days of the gifted young orator, as some papers term him and the "Hon. Thomas Brennan, M. P.," as others style him, (although he never filled the position of member of parliament), and the extraordinary advertisements on the part of our Irish-born citizens representing Mr. Brennan as being the champion of Irish liberty and calling upon all "lovers of freedom for an oppressed people" to attend the lecture caused the writer, with several Americans, to comply. To say that we were disappointed is to express our feelings mildly. We were astonished and surprised and to find that for forty years I had been in the wrong groove, on the wrong track that I had misunderstood the feelings and loyalty of our Irish citizens for Irish nationality and republican government humiliated me exceedingly. I was made to feel thus by the applause which greeted the speaker and the appearance of rapture with which his words were listened to. That he is an intelligent and fluent speaker there is no doubt, his graceful and student-like appearance is in his favor, but that he should be the exponent of the doctrine of Irish nationality is the most absurd idea that has been foisted upon the American people since the appearance of Oscar Wilde. He is a student, no doubt, for his speeches, as they have appeared in the San Francisco Call and Chronicle, San Jose Mercury, Los Angeles Herald, Seattle [illegible] and THE OREGONIAN, are all alike, word for word; consequently he must be a student and a fit though not likely to be successful, candidate for the British parliament. That it has been his ambition from the date of his detention as a suspect is well known, and the reason of his being suspected was his connection with the old land league. At that time no man in Ireland was free of suspicion, but he deserved no punishment and received none. Detention was merely to be shut up, while being allowed every pleasure. I simply refer to that portion of Mr. Brennan's career to show that his record as a patriot will not bear scrutiny, and that the doctrine as enunciated in his speeches is not true Irish nationality. It is but a repetition of the repeal of the union agitation and all other [illegible] agitations, which result in a great deal of oratory and the return of a few of the most prominent of the agitators to the British parliament to be manipulated by the crown ministers and rewarded by the Chiltern Hundreds or some other sinecure office. Their vote is always on the side of the crown, while the great mass of the Irish people have to suffer further degradation, greater poverty and more cruel tyranny under coercion acts brought about by the deceptive actions of would be representatives and pretended nationalists. Many and influential exceptions there are at present in the English legislature, but they are not believers in Brennan's doctrine, for they are nationalists, and Irish nationality means nothing more or less than a distinct and permanent separation from England and the establishment of a republican form of government in Ireland.

"A separate race, distinct, apart,
And so till Time itself shall end,
The English and the Irish heart
No human power can fuse or blend."

These have been the teachings and the lessons given and taken from the cradle to manhood of every true Irish nationalist from the days of Wolfstone and Emmet. What a vast difference there is in the doctrine of the National league, as stated by its great expounder and gifted orator, Thomas Brennan, M. P. I quote from THE OREGONIAN of the 18th.

"All we ask," says Mr. Brennan, "is for the same rights of the franchise as England. We ask for local government, so that those who pay local rates and taxes may have a voice in their expenditure. We ask for an amendment of the recent land act, so that the principles which it embodies may be carried out in practice. Finally we ask for rights of national self government similar to those enjoyed by various portions of the British empire without injury to its integrity or strength.

The demands of the Irish people to-day are not only consistent with loyalty to the British throne, but with the British constitution.

The means we propose to adopt to obtain our demands are those recognized by the British constitution—speaking in parliament through the representatives of the people. Any exhibition of lawlessness or act of criminal violence is as much opposed to our desire and purpose as it is manifestly injurious to our chances of success."

If that is Irish nationality I want none of it, and I deem it inconsistent with the oath of American citizenship, in fact a direct violation of it, to subscribe one dollar or in any way recognize or support such a movement that has for its object the strengthening or increasing the integrity of the British throne or empire." Allow me to suggest to my fellow citizens of Irish birth to read that clause in their naturalization papers which obliges them to "forswear all allegiance to foreign governments, particularly the British.

As Americans imbued with the freedom and principles of Republican institutions, and appreciating their superiority over those of monarchy, the right to propagate these principles is conceded, and no people on earth will go further to assist Ireland consistent with the restrictions of international law than will the great mass of the American people, but you cannot expect them to assist or recognize your right to strengthen the integrity of the British empire. I will again quote from THE OREGONIAN:

"It is, therefore, these principles of the Irish national league that Hon. Mr. Brennan himself advocates. And in speaking of these principles he has said that the great enemy of the Irish cause is ignorance. In Ireland, ignorance has been the source of violence, when self-restraint was the first essential of success. Abroad it has been the foundation of prejudiced opposition. At the present time ignorance is fast disappearing in Ireland. The rising generation are receiving an education that was out of the reach of their fathers."

Besides being eloquent in his style Mr. Brennan must have in his superb composition a small portion of that feeling known as egotism, along with magnetism, to be able to give utterance to such sentiments and be applauded by an intelligent Irish audience. His magnetism must be as powerful as that of the serpent, which is able to draw the bird to its destruction. His remarks were applauded by hundreds of his countrymen who were educated in Ireland before ever he dreamt of nationality, and although lacking the student's style to see his equals and many his superiors. So much were they in his power that they forgot for the moment their duty as American citizens and their oath as such when approving any movement or paying any money to strengthen British supremacy. They did more. In accepting the remarks as quoted they sanctioned the greatest slander that was ever uttered when he stated that "in Ireland ignorance has been the source of all violence." Robert Emmet committed an act of violence yet he was highly educated. His speech still electrifies the world, but his epitaph is still unwritten. Brennan will never write it. What an insult and slander to the patriot martyrs of poor but brave old Ireland. Have her people become so degenerate as to calmly and silently acquiesce in the slander of her patriot dead? No, thank God, no. It is only the [illegible] milk and water representatives of an organization which so far shows its subservience to and influence that has ever shown its willingness to sacrifice Irish republican nationality in favor of English supremacy; which keeps Ireland and her people still divided by organizations having nationality only as a secondary consideration, which repudiates and discourages all republican aspirations in Ireland, fearing that such freedom would forever lose its influence in that country. It is but the representatives of such an organization under the false name of Irish National League that would cast a slur upon every brave act of the patriot dead. True Nationalists do otherwise as the following words of the chairman of the Chicago meeting on the late anniversary of the authors of "God save Ireland!" attest:

"This prayer was the legacy, peerless and beyond price, left to the Irish race by the brave men to honor whose memory we have met here to night. It is a legacy of which we may well be proud, for the history of the world shows but few examples of such devoted patriotism and sublime sacrifice as did our gallant brothers Allen, Larkin and O'Brien. Roman history holds up as a model to imitate the youth whose hand hissed in the Tuscan fire to show the besiegers of his city the sterling stuff the youth of Rome were made of; but no grander was he in his patriotism, no stronger in his courage, no loftier in his sacrifice, than were the men who, standing beneath the gallows tree, in the dark and depressing confines of a prison yard, surrounded by the frowning and unfriendly officials of a government that never had mercy on their race or land, could lift their souls out of the gloom, and, casting aside the horrors of the scene, ignoring the hideous appliances of death around, could cry with one voice, in the face of fate and in defiance of the power that encompassed their death, "God save Ireland!"

It was an inspiration from the guardian spirit of Robert Emmet. It was a spark struck from the fine foundations of Liberty's very throne. Sixteen years ago this morning, Allen, Larkin and O'Brien were judicially murdered in Manchester, because England wanted victims for a daring and successful attempt—I wish all attempts were successful—to rescue two Irish patriots from a prison van. Standing on the scaffold, the gloom of a rainy Manchester morning increased by the darkness of those mysterious and unknown shadows that haunt the border land between this life and the next, our martyrs turned their last thoughts toward their mother land, and voicing the intensity of their [illegible] souls cried, "God save Ireland!" It was a voice from the threshold of eternity. It was the voice, speaking through our martyred trinity, of our martyrs and patriots who had gone before—Wolfe Tone, Lord Edward Fitzgerald, Napper Tandy, and Sheares brothers, William Orr, Robert Emmet, Samuel Neilson and all the others who make up Ireland's glorious galaxy in the firmament of liberty. But, like the shot fired at Lexington in the American revolution which was heard around the world, so that prayer from the scaffold of a Manchester jail went around the earth and fired the Irish heart to noble endeavor. The vital spark that issued from each body, almost as soon as the prayer was spoken, communicated with Irish hearts in every clime, and, quick as the electric current makes its circuit, did it surround the earth with a girdle of light to cheer the spirits of Irishmen and guide them in the path of duty."

The Irish people have not added to their cause in this country by the presence of Thomas Brennan. The doctrines he advocates are diametrically opposed to the idea of republican government for Ireland. The sympathy, money and influence of Americans are with them when seeking that end. But there are other and more beneficial channels into which the money can be directed than in supporting British supremacy in Ireland.

"Hapless nation—hapless land,
Heap of uncementing sand,
Crumbled by a foreign weight,
And by worse, domestic hate.

"God of mercy, God of peace,
Make the mad confusion cease;
O'er the mental chaos move,
Through it speak the light of Love."

In conclusion permit me to say that the sentiments as expressed are I believe those of the majority of my Irish fellow citizens. I love Ireland but shall not forget that I am an American citizen.

Yours truly, R. D. PITT.

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

FRIDAY, Feb. 22.

The week has been one of dullness and uncertainty because of inclement weather and its possible effects. A heavy fall of snow, followed by warm rains in the valley has opened river navigation, ice having broken and passed down. This break was feared by some who apprehended that it would come in such a manner as to prove hurtful. The reverse has been the case. Melting snow and rains have penetrated the ground, as is shown in the unimportant rise in the rivers. This cannot but be of the greatest benefit to grain fields, and will help on the work. Mild moist weather now prevails. The eastern section has fared fully as well. The fall of snow before extreme cold set in and later moderate soft weather has proved all that could be desired. There has been no extreme either way, and it is quite safe to presume that fall sown wheat is safe.

General trade has been more or less excited by a number of failures, city and country. The failures were mostly in the dry goods line, and were not altogether unexpected. The more substantial houses have cash or credit enough to carry them over the dull season which is usual at this time. The interior merchants have had more to bear [illegible]. The system of long credits and a short grain season have attacked their resources, causing anxiety and necessitating close dealing. Backward weather has also operated against them, for sight drafts do not consider atmospheric influences or the demand for goods. Much has been written concerning the manner in which our merchants must proceed in order to meet outside competition, the most of which is furnished in all earnestness. It is quite safe to say that the merchant, if at all shrewd, understands very well his position. Reports from California one day give us the novel information that San Francisco houses have the bulk of Oregon dealers in their power, and the next day comes a report that San Francisco is afraid to trust us. Truly it would be well if the last were the case. The probabilities of spring trade are yet largely hidden. Observation, however, indicates that a good call is certain, with an improvement in finances. The large withdrawal of bank deposits for building last season, and for stock speculation, is the first cause of the present scarcity. Banks here prefer to work on local resources to sending away for money. This scares those who really have the least reason to be frightened. With the new season must come renewed activity and fresh confidence all around.

Business to-day was of a decided holiday character, the afternoon showing almost an entire suspension of wholesale trade. Market reports are meager and little will be done until Monday.

The weather throughout the eastern section to-day was warm, without winds. At Riparia considerable ice was running, and the river was rising. At Celilo the river rose eleven inches in twenty-four hours. The Willamette is steadily rising at this point because of rains.

The San Francisco produce exchange adjourned over till Monday. Business to-day was generally suspended.

DR. CHEEVER'S ELECTRIC BELT, or Regenerator, is made expressly for the cure of derangements of the generative organs. Whenever any debility of the generative organs occurs, from whatever cause, the continuous stream of ELECTRICITY permeating through the parts must restore them to healthy action. There is no mistake about this instrument. Years of use have tested it, and thousands of cures are testified to. Weakness from indiscretion, incapacity, Lack of Vigor, Sterility—in fact any trouble of these organs is cured. Do not confound this with electric belts advertised to cure all ills from head to toe. CAUTION.

Swift's Specific is entirely a vegetable preparation and should not be confounded with the various substitutes, imitations, non-secret humbugs, "Succus Alterans," etc., etc., which are now being manufactured by various persons. None of these contain a single article which enters into the composition of S. S. S. There is only one Swift's Specific, and there is nothing in the world like it. To prevent disaster and disappointment be sure to get the genuine.

Swift's Specific is a complete antidote to Blood Taint, Blood Poison, Malarial Poison and Skin Humors.

I have had remarkable success with Swift's Specific in the treatment of Blood and Skin Diseases and in Female Diseases. I took it myself for carbuncles with happy effect.
